It's come out of my work as the chair of a national PCUSA committee on the Nature of the Church for the 21st Century. It's come from looking at the data. And it's come from a bursting gratitude for a church that quite literally showed me God's grace.

Church planters across Latin America and Europe have expressed concern about how to make disciples of the next generation. Today's youth, particularly those in urban, postmodern cultures are not keen on 'organized religion'. Aubrey Malphus, Planting Growing Churches For The 21 st hellofromsandy.com, pps, $ In , Bob Dylan released the now-famous track "The Times They Are A-Changin.'" The song captured the revolutionary zeitgeist of 60s, and served as a warning shot to the traditional institutions of the day. Created and led by the Spirit: planting missional congregations / Church planting: the next generation: including the Century 21 church planting system / By: Mannoia, Kevin W.

In this century, church is dying. Less people are going to church now than ever before. More importantly, less people understand and agree with the foundations of scripture and who Jesus is.
